Chapter 1: How to use this index

Davenports first published the Demon Telegraph in 1933. The pages of Issues 1 to 60 are unnumbered and are almost entirely advertisements for effects, books etc.

From Issue No. 61 the magazine started to be published regularly, with articles in addition to the advertisements. The early issues of this period had a number of advertisement pages before the “magazine proper”, the pages of which were numbered. In this index these extra pages are numbered 0.1, 0.2 etc. The advertisement pages after the articles section are given page numbers continuing from the numbered pages.

Issues given as Nos. 201, 202 and 203 are “Convention Specials” which are undated, but an estimate has been made of approximate date.

On PCs, the Index is best searched by using the Control-F keys, which brings up a search panel.

All items, whether Articles or Advertisements, have been placed into Categories. The three letter Codes for these Categories are on the right-hand side of the listings in Chapters 2 and 3. For example, any item relating to Billiard Balls will be coded BIL. Chapters 5 and 6 will allow you to check up on what Code is used for a Category, as well as what Category corresponds to a Code.

In Chapter 3 the column on the far right is headed Description. If the advertisement contains a description, there is a ‘Y’ for ‘Yes’ in this column. If there is no ‘Y’, it probably means there is just a title.

Articles have up to 8 Categories, Advertisements up to 4.

One final point. In the Articles section, the Code abbreviation BOO indicates that this is an effect using a book. In the Advertisements section it simply indicates that it is a Book/Publication.

Since I created this index at the suggestion of the Davenport family, they have found it to be most useful. I hope that other users find it equally useful. Bringing the biographical and historical items, photographs and reports of shows, together into Chapter 4 makes it very much easier to explore these topics.
